

Userneeds is looking for Danish student

Would you like to work part-time with communication and online usability research?

Userneeds is one of Denmark's biggest and most professional suppliers of online market research. The company, which has 50 skilled employees, has been serving customers since 2001 throughout Europe. Userneeds is now looking for a Danish speaking student worker.

Your tasks will, among other things, include:

- Creating reports.
- Preparing qualitative reports in your native language, English and other languages if applicable.
- Assisting the Account Managers in different markets.
- Answering inquiries from panel members.
- Translations, creating content for website etc.

We expect that you:

- Are fluent in written and spoken Danish and English.
- Can work in a structured manner and have the ability to keep order working on varying daily tasks.
- Experience in Microsoft Excel is a big plus.
- Can work independently as many of your tasks will be solved independently.
- Are professionally and socially ambitious.
- Have an interest in working with written communication for a broad target group
- Are dutiful.

The working hours will be 5-15 hours per month and these hours can be structured to fit your study schedule.

We have consumer panels in Finland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland and Ireland. Our panels are of great value. They contribute with important knowledge on subjects like health, diseases, politics, consumer behavior and much more.

The successful candidate will get a key role within the organization providing usability analysis as well as support for our panel members. The candidate will be responsible for creating reports and analyzing usability data. The candidate will also assist with ad hoc-tasks, such as creating PowerPoint presentations, strategy research and sometimes translations. Moreover, the candidate will be responsible for one of Userneeds' panels, i.e. answering inquiries from panel members and other tasks related to communication.

We can offer:

- Employment in a company, which is leading the Nordic market in project management on online data collection.
- An interesting work place, where we enjoy having a lot on our plates and where we work on developing the employees' skills.
- Skilled and professional coworkers with backgrounds in economics, anthropology, sociology, computer science, communication.
- Competitive salary and flexible hours.
